Depressing to me, but I don't exactly know what sort of writing it is.

1 - I want Freedom

Darkness...shadows...everything people fear is a part of my realm. I was locked away to rot by my "family", who tricked me with lies and deceit! They promised me that things would be better...that I wouldn't have to be afraid...only to seal me away from the only one I've ever loved. Evil...I'm called the dark one of the family. Silent, so that no one knows what to expect from me, yet able to get along so well...they'll never know how my mind works and I'll never tell them. They are my sworn enemies and whenever I am free...whenever I can truly live the way I please with the one I love, they'll pay. As a child I never asked for much, just to be loved as my siblings were...but instead, I was cast away until she found me. She saved my life that fateful day and ever since then it has hurt me to leave her side. If she were to die alone...there's no telling what I'd do. I don't want anyone to be sad...but I cannot make every happy. It's as if life is my enemy. As long as I live, someone will suffer. My family took away my only sanctuary from life's harshness...and as such they should be made to pay. The ones I am intended to love raised me on hatred and bitterness, yet they seem surprised that I reached out for a small bit of hope. Why? Why did they take it all away from me? What did I do? All I want is a family who's proud of their own, who doesn't pretend you don't exist...I've been wasting away and they don't care...I've cried for help and yet my pleas fell upon deaf ears. They have made me suffer...they have made me hurt like nothing else could have...they are enemies! "Humanity"...a word I hate as much as my family. If anything, humans are the lowest form of life forms when it comes to loyalty and the respect of another's bonds. I still have bonds...I am bound to this prison by the throat and heart and my life is slowly slipping out of me as if I were bleeding.

All I want...all I will ever want...is to be free.
