Just a collection of some of the poetry I write, some are completely bizarre and uninspired while others are based on reality or emotions.

1 - Stars, Candles and Dandelions

Stars, Candles and Dandelions

A revenge on Santa Clause, really
That the priorities of mine had been so obsolete to the clouds
I'd felt ignored and ambushed
A little harpy screaming in the back of my mind
Yelling for vindication from things I did not learn
The apex in my heart swollen and passed over
Months tallying somewhere in my senses
Silently torturing themselves as they observed my fate
But I've learned better
Perhaps it was optimism
Or perhaps wishful thinking that I wasn't an outcast
I doubt I'll ever learn the truth
But I iced that naïve, selfish heart of mine
And cancelled out the one likeness of my angles
To believe I was special
Superior and guarded
By the forces who denied me my hopefulness and dreams
I debated my heart
And said they did not wish to disappoint me
That I would be fine without the treasures
And I'd never celebrated Christmas
