Alike, But Different

Summary: Koga has come to stay with Kagome and her pack for a little while; with two of his pack, Hakkakura and Ginta. But, how is Inuyasha going to react with this? How will Koga react when he finds out what they eat? How will the villages act, when they pass through them with wolves?

It was a normal day in the feudal Japan era, Kagome was making lunch while Sango and Miroku were talking, Shippo drawing pictures of the demons they came across, to show Keade when they got back, and Inuyasha watching for any danger on the way.

Kagome: "Huh...?"

"What is it, Kagome?" asked Sango as she reached for her Giant Boomerang. "Koga is headed this way." replied Kagome as she stood up. "What does he want?!" Inuyasha growled as he ran over to where Kagome was, standing possessively in front of her.

"Inuyasha! Be nice!" barks Kagome as everyone else comes over to eat their food. While everyone is eating their food, a whirlwind comes, headed straight for them. As the dust settled down, Koga strided up to Kagome and greeted her with the familiar 'Yo, Kagome!' as if he didn't notice Inuyasha.

"Um...hi, Koga-kun.." Kagome replied with hesitation as she put away her things.

"Listen, I need to know you a little better in order for me to claim you." Koga said with no hesitation as he tried to see Kagome a little more. "Like heck, wolf! There's no way your going to claim, Kagome!" fumed Inuyasha. Kagome, at this time, was starting to blush from all the attention.

"I can, and I will!" Koga yelled back, baring his fangs. "Besides it's not like Kagome'll want you as a mate." Physical pain Inuyasha could put up with, but that was too much. He would not allow Koga to take away his Kagome. About this time Hakkakura and Ginta come running up to them, out of breath from trying to catch up with their leader. "Koga!" Ginta yells, getting Koga's attention as Hakkakura leans on his legs with Ginta, panting. "Have you told Kagome yet?"

"Sure have. Now, which way are we going...uh, Merko?" Miroku's left eye twitches in irritation as he calmly, well as calmly as he could, replies. "My name is Miroku. Are you coming with us?"

"Of course I am!" Koga rudely replies and asks again, "Now which way is it?!" His teeth bared in irritation.

(Hakkakura and Ginta Pov)

Hakkakura and Ginta just stood there watching the scene before them with Inuyasha and Koga spitting insults at each other. The girl called Sango was irritated by the show, and Miroku was still pissed at Koga, yet trying to hide it, not very well, I might add.

But they didn't think Koga was for Kagome. They could tell that no matter what her actions say, she loved Inuyasha. They like her and want to be with her and her pack, yet they wanted to be with Koga and his pack.

(End Hakakura and Ginta Pov.)

Finally, Sango steps in. "QUIET!!!" Sango yells in irritation, getting everybody's attention, "I don't need to hear you two bickering about anything! We just ate so I think it's time to go. If you three are coming with us," She says pointing at Koga, Hakakura, and Ginta, "then you need to understand some things so we won't kill you from irritation. We are walking. No bickering, in fact no talking for you two," she says pointing at Inuyasha and Koga, "and we are going this way." She finishes, pointing toward Keade's village, teeth bared.

Everyone, excluding Kagome, flinched. Kagome flung her bag over her shoulder and called back to them, "We are going now, before the sun sets." Koga growls noticeably and stalks up to Kagome, then slaps her. Everyone gasps, were Ginta and Hakakura; Inuyasha growls. "My future mate will not speak like that to other males, including me," Koga yells, pointing at himself. "I will not be your mate, Koga, I don't want to be!" Kagome retorts, anger flaring across her face.

Koga's face immediately downcasts, "You don't..." he mumbles trailing off. "Koga...you're great, it's just we are two different people..." Kagome says, trying to comfort him. Of course he immediately brightens. "You probably worry that our love won't be strong, but don't worry we'll have a strong relationship." "uh-huh..." Kagome slowly says.

'There he goes again...' Hakakura and Ginta thought.

Chapter 2 (Village time)

Recap: 'There he goes again' Ginta and Hakkakura thought together. End Recap.

The day went on with Inuyasha and Koga glaring at each other, Miroku's wandering hands followed by the resounding slap and the cry of pervert, every twenty minutes, as they continued on the path towards Keade's village, to restock on their supplies and rest. (yeah right)

Kagome slipped the shoulder straps, from her backpack, off her shoulders and arms. Asking Inuyasha to carry it for her. Koga snatches the pack from her hands, causing a growl to start from within Inuyasha's throat.

"I'll carry that, Kagome-chan." Koga beamed at her, irritating the hanyou farther. "Get away from her!" Inuyasha barked at Koga, giving a death glare "I'll carry it." He grabbed the pack out of his clawed hands. "I don't know why you want to. You don't have any claims on her, so she's not your woman, she is mine." Koga says, looking smug. "She's not your woman!" Inuyasha yells pissed off.

"Is too!"

"Is not!"

"Is too!"

"Shut up! You are acting like children!" Kagome shouts at them, "Inuyasha, Koga, you can each carry it half of the time we have left of the day." She drops her bag in between them. "Never thought I would say that." She walks away from the fight, to walk with Sango. "Don't worry, Kagome-chan. We're almost there, then you can go home away from those two." Sango says pointing at the two love sick men.

"I know, but I have to tell Koga about the well. Its better now then latter." Kagome sighs from the stress of it all. Sango frowns in confusion, "What do you mean?" Kagome thinks for a minute to see how she can put it (hey thats what I'm doing), "Well he's going to find out sometime, and when he does he probably will be mad at me and I don't like it when people are mad at me."

Sango starts to put that all knowing smile on her face, "Well you don't want to be his mate, now do you. If he gets mad at you for that, then don't tell him." Kagome's face lights up from the sudden revelation,

"You are so right, Sango-chan. It should turn him off a little bit, right?" holding the last word longer than she needed to. The, sister like, friends giggled to each other of the plan.

Meanwhile...

Keade was in her herb garden, picking the herbs she need for when a village woman is delivering her baby. Keade sighed as she stood, brushing the dust off of herself. 'I wonder if Inuyasha finally told Kagome about the sent mark he keeps puting on her, only for her to wash it off' The old miko mused to herself. She found entertainment in this relationship of the two, both too ignorant to tell the other their feelings.

She saw them off in the distance, with three other people she did not reconized, as she walked back to her hut with her bundle of herbs.

With Inuyasha and the gang...

Kagome was carrying her pack again, due to the fact that Inuyasha and Koga were still fighting about who would get to carry the backpack. "We're almost there." Miroku mummled as he walked the the last few steps to the village's entrance with the rest of the gang. 'I wonder what the village will think a bout the wolves.' He added as an after thought.

Recap. Kagome was carrying her pack again, due to the fact that Inuyasha and Koga were still fighting about who would get to carry the backpack. "We're almost there." Miroku mumbled as he walked the last few steps to the village's entrance with the rest of the gang. 'I wonder what the village will think about the wolves.' He added as an after thought. End Recap.

In the village, villagers were whispering their comments on the bunch headed their way. "Why are there wolves coming to our village?" A villager whispered to another. "I think they're with Lady Kagome?" Replies the other. "Aye, she always brings new people, demons, and hanyous here with her." The other one answers.

"Should we get Lady Keade?" Asked a third person, joining in on the conversation.

"Nay, I don't think we should." Replied the second one, "We should probably see what happens."

"You mean we should act as if they are not there?" Asked the first villager, that started the whole conversation.

"Aye." The second one says, "Inuyasha is with them. He has protected the village ever since Lady Kagome came here."

"It has been said that he wishes to make Lady Kagome his mate." Said the third villager in the conversation.

The villagers were deep in thought as the group appeared in front of the village's entrance. Kagome gave a sigh as she stopped Koga before he could take another step. "Koga, Ginta, Hakkakura." She said waiting to make sure she had their attention before she spoke another word. "You can not harm any of the villagers, ok?" Ginta and Hakkakura simply nodded their heads, Koga however did not make any show that he heard her as he stepped into the village after Inuyasha, Miroku, and Sango. Kagome gave a defeated sigh as she too walked in the village with shippo on her shoulder; Ginta and Hakkakura followed behind her.

The villagers were quiet as the group walked into the village. Koga kept staring at the humans walking by them like... like they didn't see them or weren't scared. He was confused, so were Ginta and Hakkakura. They were starting to get freaked out. An elderly takes out of their befuddlement by greeting Kagome. "Welcome back." She looks at the wolf demons. "And who might they be?" She asks turning back to face the miko in-training.

"Oh... Keade-sama that is Koga, Ginta, and Hakkakura. " Kagome replies pointing at them while speaking their names.

"Then why don't you all come over to my hut for lunch?" The one they called Keade asked.

"That would be wonderful, Keade-sama. We will be there." Kagome replies for them all, as she hugs the aged miko.

As Keade was walking away Inuyasha pulled Kagome away from the others. "You aren't really going to be his mate, right?" Inuyasha said, hoping she would say no.

"Inuyasha, why would I even want to be his mate. Besides he is irritating at times." She says, watching as Koga growled at a little girl that wanted to pull his tail, "You see?" With that the young miko walked back to the rest of her odd pack. A demon slayer, a perverted monk, a kitsune kit, a cat demon, and a irritated hanyou, not to mention the three wolf demons and their two wolves they have with them.

Later on in Keade's hut Koga, Ginta, and Hakaku were in the hut watching the odd group eat this strange substance they called stew. "Are you sure you don't want to eat?" Kagome asked from across the fire, due to the fact that Inuyasha wouldn't allow her to sit next to the mangy wolf or so he liked to call him.

Ginta spoke up first. "Hey sis, what are you eating?" Ginta asked.

"Stew." Kagome replied calmly for the twenty-fifth time that day ever since they arrived at the village in the hut.

Hakkakura sighed. "I guess I will eat a little." He said, apprehension clear on his face as Kagome gave him some of the stew. He and Ginta sniffed at it, being cautious. "Are you sure you want to eat it?" Ginta whispered to his brother.

"I said I would..." He trailed off using his claws as chopsticks he plopped a piece of meat into his mouth, being surprised at the taste he got from it. He never tasted anything like it. He swallowed with a smile. "I like it." He said before he started slurping the rest down.

"I want some, sister." Ginta said giving her a pleading look as he watched her pour him some. "Here." She said politely handing him the bowl she just filled, before he started eating too. "Do you want some too, Koga-kun?" Kagome asked setting another full bowl down in front of him before he could reply. 'Finally they're eating.' She thought to herself.

Truely she didn't know how she got this far, but it was nice to see this funny scene in front of her. It reminded her of Inuyasha and his ramen. Speaking of Inuyasha, she looked over to see him with the 'stop or I'll gut you' face. She stifled a giggle at what she saw when she saw what he was looking at. The three wolf demons had the stew all over their faces, not to mention their hands. Sango and Miroku looked at them as if they were insane or drunk while Shippo drew the picture before him, in case he needed a laugh in the future.

Finally she couldn't take it anymore, she bursted ou laughing. Everyone turned to look at her causing her to laugh harder at the confused faces. Sango and Miroku started to laugh as well. Keade came in, holding a basket fo freshly picked herbs to be made into medicine, "What are ye three laughing about?" She looked around to see the three wolf demons covered in stew and started chuckling herself. "I never thought demons would like my cooking so much." She mused to herself as she went to the back room to prepare the herbs, leaving the demons, save Kilala and Shippo, confused.

Koga starts to growl in irritation, "What the heck was that about!?" Kagome stops her laughing to look over at the wolf demon who asked the qeustion. "Nothing, never mind." She replies as she stands up, walking out the opening of the hut, grabing her yellow backpack that she had pack an hour before hand, breathing the fresh sumer time air in.

She was sure that Inuyasha would follow her and they would have their argument that she was so used to at the well but for now she could enjoy the peace and let her mind catch up on the days events, 'Koga is joining are travels with us, Inuyasha hasn't killed him yet adn Shippo seem to be acting more like Inuyasha today more than ever.

Flashback to earlier that day...

Shippo was sitting on one of the wolves indian style as he kept feh-ing at every comment that people made with his arms in his sleeves as everyone looked at him like he was insane then looked at Kagome as if she should do something, she just shugged it off.

End flashback.

Kagome giggled at the memory when she walked into somebody's chest. Looking up she discovered it to be Inuyasha that normal scowl on his face. Oh how she wish that he would smile more often, that smile he only gave her when they were alone, which was not at this time. When he was happy and not mad over some test. Kagome was pulled from her day dreaming by the sound of Inuyasha's voice.

WOW!! My longest chapter yet! Please tell me what you think? -does cute puppy dog face- Remember to always read and reveiw my storys it make me happy and I work better when I'm happy with tons of reveiws. So please read and reveiw. I have other storys prepared to write after this fanfiction. Thanks for reading.

"Oi, wench. Where do you think you're going?!" Inuyasha demanded. Kagome inwardly groaned. Here it comes again. Kagome sighed loudly as she picked herself off the ground. "Inuyasha, I need to go home for..." Kagome couldn't speak anymore because Inuyasha cut her off there. "you don't need to go anywhere!" Inuyasha stated, pushing the miko back to the hut they started at. 'She has to have my scent on her.' He added as an after thought.

"Inuyasha! Let me go!" Kagome shrieked, getting an idea. "You know what would make Koga really mad?" Kagome asked, with a little mischief, letting him 'drag' slash 'pull' her to their destination. Inuyasha's demon side thanked whoever that made his dog this way (dog means female dog). He knew that his demon would do whatever it took to make his his Kagome, his mate also. The mother of his pups. And dog was just what dog demons called their mates, their life mates. Inuyasha stopped his train of thought to answer his miko with his casual feh, as always.

Kagome, seeing this as catching his interest, she continued. "Why don't you and me, both go to my era for a day or so. I wonder what Koga will do, when he can't find us. What do you think, Inuyasha?" Kagome taunted.

That got Inuyasha's mind working, well mostly his demon side. 'Darn, I shouldn't reward her for this, but this is just too good.' Inuyasha started to pull her the other way, towards the well.

Kagome congratulated herself. Now all she had to do is get Inuyasha to let her go to her school. Maybe I could have him come with me, as just a visitor. When Inuyasha and Kagome got to the well they jumped in, together.

In Keade's hut...

"Where is mutt-face going off to?" Koga asked, standing up. "Why is Kagome alone? Probably with mutt-face, now that I think about it." Koga stucked his nose up in the air in distaste.

"Oh, that's right you don't know about the well." Miroku stated, looking pleased that he could tell what the well was. However Sango had other things in mind and telling them about the well was not one. But as fate would have it, that was not going to happen.

"What do you mean 'the well'?" Koga started to stare daggers in them, with a slight challenge to his voice. Sango shifted under his gaze. Miroku had that grin on his face again. "Are you hungry, Miroku? 'Cause I am. What about you three?" Sango blurted out, trying to get their attention off of the Bone Eaters well. Hakkakura and Ginta, both held out their bowels out for more food. Both full, but wanting to taste more of the stew and besides who doesn't want to stuff themselves. You never know when you will be able to eat your fill.

"Nice try, but I want to know what this well is about." Koga directed their attention back, giving them glares told them that they would have to answer sometime soon, but that didn't mean they couldn't try.

"Bone Eater's well, to be exact." Sango answered. Miroku on the other hand just watched, amused, as Sango tried to get their attention off of the well. "So, aren't you hungry Koga." Sango asked, hoping that he would drop it. No such luck.

"Bone Eater's well?" Their was a little question in his voice.

Recap. "Bone Eater's well, to be exact." Sango answered. Miroku on the other hand just watched, amused, as Sango tried to get their attention off of the well. "So, aren't you hungry Koga." Sango asked, hoping that he would drop it. No such luck.

"Bone Eater's well?" There was a little question in his voice. End recap.

Sango looked down at her hands, which were resting in her lap. Miroku decided that he should at least speak up. Since Sango seemed too occupied with her hands at the moment, "The Bone Eater's well is where Kagome time-travels from our world to her world. That is what the well is used for." Miroku finished with a hint of pride in his voice.

Koga, Ginta, and Hakaku stared at them like they were insane, before Koga questioned them further. "What do you mean, 'our world' and 'her world'?" Koga had a feeling that he wasn't going to like it.

"Well you see.." Sango began, looking up from her lap, then ended quickly. "Kagome should tell you herself." The demon slayer looked down at her lap again.

"Sango is right, it's Inuyasha and Kagome's secret to reveal." Miroku said, even though it was really more of Kagome's secret to reveal. But Koga wanted to know now and it didn't seem like he was going to give up. "She's going to be my mate, she should trust me. If she told you, then you can tell me." Koga said in a matter-of-fact voice. "Besides if it is Inuyasha's secret too, then it's of my concern." Koga stuck his chin up, like he was in charge of the operation.

"Still not giving up on that, are you?" Ayame walked in the hut with a slight smile on her face.

"Ayame? What are you doing here...?" Koga asked, startled that she was here.

"Kagome introduced me to the whole village a while ago. She also told me about the well." Ayame replied, her tiny smile turning into a full blown grin.

Koga was speechless. 'Kagome would tell Ayame before myself,' he thought, before putting his mouth into action. "Then you can tell me what this 'well' is; these bone-heads won't tell me." Koga said looking at Miroku and Sango then back at the female demon in front of him.

"Sorry Koga, but I can't tell either. Kagome and I are friends; you should know that." Ayame replied, sitting down to eat some of the stew that she knew was always prepared for anyone who wanted or needed some in other cases.

"Kagome and you are friends? Since when?" Ginta asked, not even trying to hide the surprise in his voice.

"Yeah, since when?" His brother Hakaku said, agreeing with Ginta.

"For a while now." Ayame replied with a bored type of voice. "Kagome and I are friends; that is all you need to know."

Both Miroku and Sango remembered that interesting time. When they both silently agreed that they were friends, and when they told Ayame about the well. She had looked at them like they were crazy. But they proved to her that it was real. Then they remembered that the reason why she was here was that they were going to see if they could go to Kagome's era with a little help from both Kagome and Inuyasha. 'Oh crud. Koga will try, too,' they thought together.

In Kagome's era, with Inuyasha and Kagome...

Kagome was dressed in her pink and blue puppy pajamas while studying for another test in her bedroom. Inuyasha was sitting Indian-style on her bed, watching her study. 'If only you could love me, Kagome...' He thought, his thoughts trailing off as he continued to watch the miko that stole his heart.

Recap. Kagome was dressed in her pink and blue puppy pajamas while studying for another test in her bedroom. Inuyasha was sitting Indian-style on her bed, watching her study. 'If only you could love me, Kagome...' He thought, his thoughts trailing off as he continued to watch the miko that stole his heart. End recap.

Inuyasha was getting tired, so he knew that Kagome must be worn-out. His eyes kept drooping, he was determined to stay awake until the miko, fell asleep. 'Maybe I'll just rest my eyes for a sec.,' He thought as he drifted off to sleep, on Kagome's bed.

Kagome sighed as she studied, for her math test. 'How long was I away? Surely not this long,' Kagome sighed again as she continued her studies. Tomorrow, there's a math test; there was no way around that. "Inuyasha?" Kagome says, "Inuyasha?" She repeats when she doesn't get an answer. The miko turns around to see Inuyasha sleeping on her bed. Almost laughing at his chosen pose; spread eagle. Kagome gets up, bringing her books with her, to continue studying on the floor by the bed.

'Inuyasha, why do you still love Kikyo? Why?' Kagome thought as she studied her school work, on the floor, her mind drifting to blackness.

'Ringing. I hear something ringing. Oh shoot!' Kagome thought as reality came crashing back. Kagome sat up, as fast as humanly possible, to turn off her alarm clock. That's when she realized that something warm was beside her. She looked over to see Inuyasha sleeping. 'What? I was studying, last night, on the floor. How did...?' Her thoughts were cut off as he remembered the math test that was today.

She jumped out of bed, at least she tried. Two strong arms were wrapped around her. Kagome mentally groaned. She grabbed a pillow, with her free arm, and slid through his arms, going down, leaving the pillow behind.

Kagome fell on the floor, jumped up as fast as she could go, and got dressed. She would have to skip the shower today. She grabbed her books that were on the floor and the desk and headed for the door. Looking back at the clock she nearly fainted. She had an hour of time left to get ready.

'Right, I forgot to change the time for my alarm clock when I left for the feudal era. Well might as well take a shower,' She thought as she set her books on her desk, going through her drawers looking for underwear, a tank top, and some pants. Once found, she took them out, bringing them to the bathroom with her. She started the shower, stripping and getting in.

Inuyasha woke up to the sound of the water running, blushing when he remembered that he laid Kagome in bed with him. He was going to get up so she wouldn't know. 'Darn. I just wanted to lay with her, but I fell asleep. Now she's probably going to hate me for it,' Inuyasha berated himself for the mistake. He got up, straitening his clothes out. He made his way out the door and downstairs.

'Dang, this place is huge. How rich is her family?' He thought. Just one more thing he liked about Kagome was that she wasn't a snob or snooty, even if she could get anything she wants. That was just one more thing, making him love Kagome. 'At least Koga can't come here.' He thought with glee.

Sorry for skipping here and there. So what do you think? Cute? I swear, the only way I can get asleep at night is by thinking up more ideas for my Inuyasha fanfics. After this fanfic, I will have another one I'll be doing. Don't worry, it will never end. At lease in our minds, it will live on and on. I think this fan fiction will get more action and adventure in it. The question is do you want them to go after and defeat Naraku or just don't bother with that.

I will be taking a poll...

Go after and defeat Naraku? Just don't bother with it?

Review and tell me your answer. I'll add them all up. Personally, I like the idea of them killing their enemy and on the way Inuyasha and Kagome could come closer to admitting their love with Koga coming along. Sounds kind of romantic.

In the Fuedal Era by the Bone Eater's Well...

"Agh! Her scent ends here," Koga screams in frustration, pacing back and forth in front of the well where Kagome's scent disappeared. Hakkaku and Ginta sat in front of the Goshinboku watching Koga pace. Sango and Miroku were nearby watching Shippo and Kilala.

"Miroku," Sango started, stealing her eyes away from Kilala and the kit, Shippo, to look at him. "Do you think Kagome and Inuyasha will want to tell them of her era?"

Miroku sighed before he replied, keeping his eyes on the wolves that were walking around, "I am not sure. Inuyasha well probably hat the idea." He sighed again as he turned his attention to Koga, watching him continue to pace then stop and sniff a little for the young miko's scent.

"Hey Hakkaku?" Ginta asked, looking at his brother. "Yeah," He replied, turning his head to look at his brother also. "Where do you think sister is?" asked Ginta, referring to Kagome. "Don't know. Her pack is quite trust worthy so they won't tell us," The other wolf-demon replied.

Ginta appeared to be deep in thought. "It has something to do with the well," They sighed together as they fell back in the grass, saying, "We've been here all day!"

Koga stopped in his track to look at his faithful followers and Kagome's pack, thinking, 'I need to get some food for them all. Can't have Kagome's pack without food .' Looking at hem he yelled, "I'm going hunting for some food!"

Shippo and Kilala stopped playing as they both stared at the wolf leader. Suddenly, Shippo ran up to him as fast as his legs could carry him. "Take me, take me. I want to learn how to hunt," Shippo said, when he reached him. "Inuyasha said that he would, but he won't be here for a couple of days." Koga almost fell over at the request. "What are you talking about?! You're still too young!" Koga shouted out.

"But...," Shippo started, giving him the best puppy pout he could pull off.

Naraku's insects, saimyouhou, buzzed nearby as they watched the scene before them. They flew off to tell their master the news.

Naraku's castle...

Kagura looked out of the castle, just looking out there with a blank look on her face as she let her mind drift to the freedom that she sought so desperately. Being pulled from her thoughts by the poisonous insects that were nearing the castle, she thought, 'What is Naraku planning now?' She continued to watch them as they flew in, through the front entrance of the castle, in search of their master Naraku.

Naraku was rolling the almost completed Jewel in his hands as he waited for his saimyouhou to return to him. All of a sudden three of them appeared in front of him, relaying him the message they had. "Excellent, this should be interesting. Quite interesting indeed," The evil hanyou replied before he ordered them to bring Kanna to him. He wished to see this for himself.

In The Modern Era...

Kagome came down for breakfast after her hot shower. Her school uniform was torn in a few places, so she put a tank-top and jeans on. Strange thing was she put lip gloss on too. She didn't know why, but she wanted to put some on; it was a light pink. The tank-top was little low-cut, so it showed some cleavage which made Kagome blush at the thought of it.

Kagome was pulled from her thoughts by Inuyasha's yelling. "Wench, what do you think your wearing?" Inuyasha yelled at her looking at the jeans that in his opinion were way too tight and the shirt was too tight and low-cut for his liking.

He felt himself growl deep in his throat as he felt his over-protective demon side trying to get out to kill all males that would dare to look at what was his and his alone. His wench.

Kagome looked up at the hanyou that looked like he was about to blow a fuse. "Do you like it?" she asked twirling around, the words coming out of her mouth before she could stop them.

He looked flabbergasted at what she just said before yelling, "Like it?! It leaves nothing to the imagination Kagome! Some boy is going to take advantage of you if you keep running around like THAT!!

"So," Kagome replied with a look that clearly stated that she wasn't changing.

"SO," Inuyasha repeated, " You are not leaving until you put clothes on."

"Inuyasha, I can do what I want," Kagome complained, grabbing her white school shoes and throwing them on.

"Oh no, you're not going any wearing that," He said 'that' as if it was the most disgusting thing in the world, which was the opposite of his thoughts; he just didn't want other males near her and this would just make them come closer. "Unless I'm coming with you into that 'skool' place you love so much," He finished, clearly agitated and not going to stand down.

The young miko sighed as she caved in, besides I want him to come anyway. Partly because she wanted to show off even though Inuyasha wasn't her's, her friends thinks he is. "Okay," she said with a final sigh.

Inuyasha looked stunned. Wasn't she supposed to say 'no' then sit him if he tried; which he always did. "Come on, Inuyasha. We don't have all day," Kagome said as she grabbed a bandana, since it would be allowed in school and she was thinking that it wouldn't irritate his cute little doggie ears that she loved. She was planning to leave and go back to the fuedal era in a couple of days.

A while ago there was a report of girls missing from her highschool and her grandfather ran around fussing that she should be home schooled. It was getting on her nerves so when she was having her shower her Jii-chan told her from outside the bathroom that she wasn't going to school. She told him that Inuyasha was coming with her, to keep her safe. He rejoiced that she would be protected that he wrote notes for each of her teachers telling that a young boy, Kagome's boyfriend would be with her. Explaining that he wanted his only grand daughter to be protected by this young man.

He even ran down and bought some clothes so he wouldn't look too out of place. Which she saw her Jii-chan made him wear already. He had a short-sleaved red musle shirt and baggy black jeans on.

At school...

"Inuyasha," Kagome shouted again at the hanyou.

"No! It smells," Inuyasha complained as he pushed himself away from the front door of Kagome's school.

They were at the school building, but due to the fact of the different smells there was quite strong smelling, even for her, was keeping the hanyou from entering willingly.

"Just put up with it, people are staring," Kagome said looking at the many faces that stood to watch the scene.

"Excuse me, Higurashi-san," The teacher waited until she had the young miko's attention before continuing, "You may come inside now." She gave them an ice cold glare that sent a chill up their spines and the onlookers go back to their activities. Even Inuyasha got up and slowly followed Kagome into the building. The teacher watched them leave before she left for the classroom she was attending.

Kagome made her way to the front of the class with Inuyasha sitting next to her.

With Koga in the feudal era...

Koga came back with some fish and a couple of rabbits for lunch and dinner. Walking in Kaede's hut, he dropped down and started to skin and gut a rabbit in front of Sango and Kaede. Miroku was helping some men in the village repair a damaged hut.

"Uh, what are you doing," Sango asked with a little caution in her voice. After all, one never knows when a wolf-demon sits in front of you and continues to gut an animal.

"What does it look like," Koga grunted, "You humans like your food skinned and gutted, don't you?" He finished with a puzzled look on his face.

In the future...

When the teacher left the room for a little bit, the talk about Kagome's 'boyfriend' filled the room.

And of all things, Hojo had to appear at that second.

"Are they talking about me Kagome," Hojo said, walking up to the raven-haired beauty. Before Kagome could answer he continued, "I didn't know you wanted people to know about are relationship. It kind of makes me embarrassed."

'Okay, how long does it take for a guy to see that I'm not interested?' Kagome thought as she looked at Inuyasha from the corner of her eye.

Before Kagome could comment, Inuyasha started his normal routine of doing a low growl. The young miko nudged her hanyou companion, to get him to stop. Which proved to be a unsuccessful attempt.

"Who the heck are you!?" Inuyasha growled out.

For the first time Hojo seemed shocked, normally he's too dense to even notice anything. As Hojo came out of his shock he placed his normal smile on his face. "I must apologize. Forgive me for my rudeness, my name is Hojo," Hojo said, his smile getting even more unnaturally big.

Kagome inwardly groaned at the comment. She didn't want to deal with it now of all times. Before Inuyasha could talk, which was a first, the young miko said, "Inuyasha!"

"Excuse me?" Hojo asked, tilting his head in confusion.

Recap. "Excuse me?" Hojo asked, tilting his head in confusion. End recap.

"He meant nothing," Kagome said quickly, waving her hand up and down. Inuyasha sat back, clearly not happy with this, glaring holes in the back of her head. Hojo's smile came back.

"O..kay," Hojo said like he was a little unsure of himself. "Anyway I'm free this Saturday and I wanted to see if you would like to do something," He finished rubbing the back of his neck, looking sheepishly.

The hanyou, clad in red, next to her could barely contain the confusion that graced his features perfectly. 'Saturday? When was that again. Wait!! Alone? With Kagome?!' Inuyasha's look of confusion disappeared to a look of envy and rage.

Suddenly 'his' chair was pushed back, almost falling over as Inuyasha stood up fast; arms at his sides and hands forming fists.

Kagome stood too, following his lead without thinking. Only to have the teacher come. "Settle down, settle down," The teacher's voice sounded as he came into where there would have been a fight, in Inuyasha's case, if he didn't come in to distract them from the topic at hand. "Please take your seats students. I will not have a fight break out in my class," He finished walking over to his desk up in front; setting the papers he had in his hands on the center of the desk.

"Sorry," Kagome mumbled setting her hand on her hanyou's shoulder, gently pushing down.

Complying he sat down pulling his chair back to 'his' desk. A few teenagers who were watching, namely the whole class, unglued their eyes from the three and reluctantly gave the teacher full attention. "Well it appears we have a visitor or so I have been told," Again came the teacher's monotone voice. All eyes fell on our silver-haired half-demon.

Tapping the table in a semi-nervous manner, Inuyasha sent a glare in people's directions. Raising her hand our young but powerful miko got the homeroom's teacher's attention along with Inuyasha and the rest of the class. Suddenly a bit nervous; politely, Kagome said, "That would be Inuyasha, sir."

"And I'm guessing that would be the one with silver hair and a bandana?" He asked indicating Inuyasha.

Slowly, she nodded her head as a few girls giggled at the reference to the Visitor. Turning to Inuyasha he continued, "How long will you be visiting?"

Inuyasha looked at Kagome then at the teacher. "Just a few days," He replied truthfully.

Recap. Inuyasha looked at Kagome then at the teacher. "Just a few days," He replied truthfully. End Recap.

The School bell rang overhead as the high school students piled out of the school, normally accompanied by their friends to the mall or a fast food place maybe both.

"Inuyasha, come on!" Kagome yelled, pulling Inuyasha along with her. Mostly he spent the day glaring at every teenage boy that so much as looked her way. Like he was doing now.

Stopping, Kagome sighed as they finally got on the sidewalk away from the people coming that all seemed to go the opposite way of them; which Inuyasha was grateful for. "Inuyasha when do we go back," Kagome asked as they began walking again. "We'll go after tomorrow," Came the simple reply. Kagome nodded her head as her reply after saying a quick 'Okay.' After all she knew that he could only handle so much. They continued on in a comfortable silence to the shine where Kagome lived. Not very much anymore, because of the feudal era, but she didn't care, she was too busy with the shards and Naraku. Not to mention Koga trying to impress her.

"Kagome, Inuyasha come inside," Kagome's mother called after she opened the door as soon as they got up the steps and to the placemat in front of the door. "Hey mom," Kagome greeted, going up to her room with Inuyasha trailing behind. Sighing Kagome plopped down on her pink colored quilt, after dropping her backpack by the door and grabbing a few books, paper, and a pen to study with. Inuyasha sat leaned up against the wall, near her. It reminded Kagome somewhat of the feudal era when the birds chirped outside her window.

In the feudal era...

"Um., yes," Sango said, hesitating only slightly (Telling him that humans did like their food skinned). Koga had just started skinning the fish when Shippo came bounding in. "What are you doing?" He asked looking as if he was crazy for skinning something in front of Sango, who looked like she was about to throw-up last night's dinner.

"Not you too," Koga said, "I would think that you would know humans like their food skinned."

"Well yeah, but I would think that you would know they don't like to watch," Shippo stuck his tongue out. "But-" Koga but himself off to look at Sango, who he found had left. He blinked once, twice. Looking left and right, finally looking to the tatami mat covering the doorway. It was still flapping in the wind from when she made her quick escape. Shippo plopped down on the other side of the hut. Pulling his DS out of nowhere that Kagome gave him, and turned it on to play his favorite game: Nintendogs: Dalmatian & Friends.

He has only two dogs so far. Koga went back to what he was doing before, but not before he looked at the device in the kits hands. More like glaring as it made sounds he had never heard before then. He continued his work, glancing every once and awhile at the kit tapping at something and talking to it. To say that he looked insane to the wolf demon didn't even justify how he saw it.

The young fox demon continued; oblivious to Koga staring at him. Somehow Koga had managed to start inching his way to the kit. Looking up from his work, for only a second, when he heard a dog bark.

With Naraku...

Naraku was searching through Kanna's mirror for the miko and half-demon that disappeared from his sight. Kagura was flying elsewhere, when he planed more schemes to kill his enemies

He rolled the mostly completed Shikon jewel between his fingers. It was irritating him to no end. The miko, Kagome, would be gone at time and sometimes the hanyou. Although this time the hanyou is still gone when normally he would only be gone for a few hours at most. Now that the wolf-demon was joining them it just added to his list of problems. All of it made him nervous if they had found a way to mask themselves good enough so he wouldn't be able to find them no matter what. He continued his search for them with those thoughts running through his mind.

Ayame was running back to Kaede's village. She had checked to see how her grandfather was doing with her pack. She was hoping that, Kagome and Inuyasha, didn't come back while she was gone. She slowed down when she saw the village coming into view. It seemed that everything was peaceful until she heard a slap and a shout of 'Hentai.' From what she knew was that the monk was telling futures again and the demon slayer was keeping in line. She made her way to the village outskirts before sniffing for Kagome's scent.

Confirming that she wasn't in this world she it up to the hut the group stayed at when they were in the village. Slowing down again so she could just walk into the hut. As soon as she did she saw Koga. Frowning, Ayame thinks, 'Wow, even I knew that humans don't like to watch stuff like that.' Confirming that by the smell that Sango probably ran from the room. She was pulled to attention by him try to look over the fox-demon's shoulder at something and now him trying to grab it. Shippo, of course, was teasing him with it using his fox magic to fool him. All in all she didn't know how this started.

Not wanting to hang around any longer she left to find the demon slayer and monk; even though in was amusing. Maybe they would be acting in a more normal manner then the others that were in Kaede's home. Continuing on her way she passed by villagers airing out their sleeping mats and blankets, working in the fields, and the village children playing. She figured that they would be near the river, so that would be her first destination to look. Sure enough she found them there. They were calmly talking which was odd since form when she got near the village she knew they were having a fight from the yelling. Yet it seemed as if they were content. Sneaking a little closer to them so she could see their faces, for a hint of what they were thinking.

Miroku was wearing a face full of love that reflected Sango's face. "Miroku," Ayame heard her say.

Miroku looked into her eyes and began to talk to her, "Sango, I I-love you,"

"Oh, Miroku!" Sango shouted in glee, "I love you too!"

"Really?!" Miroku also shouted. She nodded her head with plenty of enthusiasm. She leaned her head up and locked lips with her beloved. He returned the kiss with all the passion he had. Sango threw her arms around his neck deepening the kiss and in return he put his hands on her waist, pulling her closed. Sango pulled away first to catch her breath. Miroku slipped his hands up to her shoulders. Quickly catching his breath too, he asked her something that she never thought he would say so beautiful. Getting down on one knee he asked her something that would change their lives, "Sango, please do me the honor of being your husband?" Looking in her eyes that began to panic. Before he could apologize for whatever he did, she shouted, "Yes!!" Throwing her arms around him, again, giving him a bear hug, tackling him to the ground.

Startled Miroku was easy to knock over. Giving him a chaste kiss on the cheek she got off of him, helping him on his way up. Suddenly they heard a crash. Looking behind them what they saw surprised them to no end. Ayame was trying to sneak off before they knew she was there. Yet as fate would have it there were baskets behind her and also some clay pots behind the baskets. She tripped over the baskets when she walked backwards, landing with her butt in one of the clay pots. Causing the pot to crash into the ground shattering the clay.

Her face was pink from blushing. Although nothing compared to the two lovers whose faces rivaled that of a ripe tomato from the neck up.

"Wha-what are you doing her?" Sango stuttered.

"Uhh," Ayame took a pause in her to think of some excuse for her eaves dropping. Looking at the river she says, "I w-was getting a drink."

"Of course," Miroku finally speaks up, "Shall we leave Sango. She only nods her head as an answer. Grabbing his hand she makes a hasty get away. Pulling the monk with her.

Kagome's era...

Inuyasha was still putting on his clothes with a little help from Sota. The modern clothes were confusing when you've only been accustomed to tying, not zippers, buttons, snaps and even the style of the clothing. Although he did like the stretchiness of the fabric he would like his fire rat clothes just because of the protection of fire and he didn't feel comfortable with the tightness. The shoes he could live without.

CHAPTER 14

Recap. Inuyasha was still putting on his clothes with a little help from Sota. The modern clothes were confusing when you've only been accustomed to tying, not zippers, buttons, snaps and even the style of the clothing. Although he did like the stretchiness of the fabric her would like his fire rat clothes just because of the protection of fire and he didn't feel comfortable with the tightness. The shoes he could live without. End recap.

He looked in the full-length mirror in Sota's room making sure that it looked straight enough. "Inuyasha, are you ready?" came Kagome's voice from the other side of the door. "Feh, of course onna," Inuyasha replied. Kagome just brushed being called woman off being used to all kinds of insults from him. Inuyasha stepped out of the room. Wearing this time a purple shirt with a bald eagle on the front and brown baggy jeans. 'I'm missing the muscle shirt,' Kagome thought seeing the attire. Before she knew it her backpack was thrown over Inuyasha's shoulder. Following after him down the steps to the kitchen for their breakfast; scramble eggs and bacon. Yum! After breakfast, during which they told her family that her and Inuyasha were going back to the feudal era tomorrow, left Sota wanting Inuyasha to play with him after school.

Which left Kagome to tell they had to leave fairly soon after, but he could still play with Inuyasha for an hour as she packed. An alarm went off in the hanyou's head as she said that. 'How dare our mate tell us what to do,' Came a thought from the demonic side of the young hanyou's mind. 'Quiet, she's not our mate and never will be,' reprimanded the human side. 'We are not worthing of her,' it continued.

'I can assure you that I will take control and claim her as mine,' the demonic version said before going back in the corners of his mind.

Grabbing her backpack she headed out with Inuyasha behind her. She continued down the steps of the Higurashi shine towards the sidewalk; cars were passing by on the road. They made their way to the building and got in only a few minutes before the bell would ring. The students were running a muck on the school's ground. Inuyasha spotted Hojo coming towards them from the gates. He soon was three feet away from them. Kagome didn't notice him as of yet. Panicking that the human boy would get here to lose her attention on him, selfish as it was, he crashed his lips down on hers. Peeking at Hojo he saw that he was stopped dead in his tracks. Shock wasn't close to describing his face. The young maiden remained oblivious to the prescece, losing herself in the kiss. Inuyasha's hands moved to the small of her back pushing he against him. He expected him to walk away, yet he did the unexpected when it came to him and people like him. Anger took control of him.

With a quick pace, he gently punched the half-demon on the cheek after pulling Kagome away from Inuyasha severing their lips. The half-human took a couple of steps back from the punch surprised at the strength behind it. A crowd of the students circled around the fight taking place on the school grounds like spectators at a sport. Before Inuyasha could respond for an attack of his own, Hojo does a left-handed punch to his stomach. Leaving himself open for attack he does a backward kick against the half-demon's right side. Inuyasha sees the opening he left. His left leg comes up slightly to sweep him off his legs causing both him and the boy to fall.

"Inuyasha!" Kagome shrieked, "Quit, please."

'No!' Inuyasha's demon side screamed in his head, 'Finish this male off.'

'Leave the boy alone, he will not interfere,' yelled a different voice he hadn't heard before but it sounded quite familiar. Like he heard it somewhere. Inuyasha was sure he did hear it from somewhere. Was it his human side? Something told him 'yes.' But why were they both talking to him now? He was thrown out of his thoughts by a fist to the face. With his cheek stinging he tried to subdue the high school student. If you could call it that. Inuyasha grabbed him from behind around the neck. Hojo's hands flew up to the half-demon's wrist. "Don't hurt him!" They heard her scream again. Kagome reached them in seconds, pulling them apart. Inuyasha let go and stood up while Kagome helped Hojo up. The hanyou let out a low growl. "I'll see you later Hojo-san," Kagome whispered to him before being dragged inside.

"I had him, Kagome," Inuyasha said gruffly, "Why did you interfere?" He continued dragging her to the front doors.

"Inuyasha! Let go of me!" She reprimanded him, Kagome the young miko, snapped her hand back as if to say she she could walk on her own. "I'm not judging your strength! Your getting too competitive," She said, knowing that he was sensitive about his power. Inuyasha pouted. Somehow they came to this silent agreement to let it slide, leaving a slight tension.
