1 - Crying Eyes

Crying Eyes By, Megan Stebenne Running, hiding throughout the night, Everyone's eyes full of fright. Gun shots ringing throughout the town, After all was clear not a single living soul was found. Cramped in boxcars with not enough room, Breathing in the stench of nasty fumes. Children stare with tear-stained eyes, Unaware of what in their future lies. Pushed out by soldiers with guns, Poking and prodding at everyone. In lines they are made to wait, Waiting for the soldiers to seal their fate. Men in one line, women and children in the other, Never again able to see one another. The elderly and children then learn, That they are led away to be burned. Led away into small, cramped spaces, Seeing the eyes of many faces. Looking at eyes full of doubt, Finally realizing there is no way out. Made to work all day long, Making sure to do nothing wrong. If seen making a mistake, In the morning they shall never wake. Heading back to their rooms, Knowing that this will be their doom. Never again finding the light of day, For everyone has lost their way. Seeing the tears that never fall, Not being able to get out of it all. Seeing everything around you die, Looking at all those crying eyes.

2 - Final Destination

Final Destination By, Megan Stebenne Being beaten a daily routine, A mother who is always cruel and mean. Day in and day out dealing with strife, Love never seen in his life. Meeting a man who has lost a love, All of his family gone above. Both feeling love for the first time, Seeing the love in their shining eyes. Having to go back home, Realizing again he will be all alone. Back under the cupboard he will be held captive, Stuck doing nothing, never again to be active. A light shines in his face, knowing he will not have to show anymore disgrace. Being safe once again with the one that he loves, Like seeing the sky filled with doves. Finally not having to run away anymore, His soul will no longer be torn. For these two have found the greatest salvation, Finding that love is the final destination. This poem is about Will living at first a tortured life and then going to the country and finding Mr. Tom. Then in the story Will has to go back to live with his mother who has fallen "ill." After a month of no news, Mr. Tom goes to go find Will. The end of the poem shows that Will is found and that Mr. Tom and Will shall be able to live with each other for the rest of their lives. A happy ending to a sad story.
