

Behold the RANDOMNESS!

By NightRat

Submitted: November 25, 2007

Updated: November 25, 2007

These are just little stories that appear in my head...

Provided by Fanart Central.

<http://www.fanart-central.net/stories/user/NightRat/50006/Behold-RANDOMNESS>

Chapter 1 - The Man Who Was Too Famous

2

1 - The Man Who Was Too Famous

There once was a man who built his own tributary into a desert off a very important river by himself. He made it very long and wide after ten years and soon people began to visit. He decided to run boat rides there and get money for all his hard efforts. He met a nice lady and they had a family together who ran the boat rides too. The man became very famous because he had built the river all by himself so more people began to visit. Soon it was the most famous place in the country. Then the most famous place in the world. People came from far corners of the earth to see his river. The king of the country began to get angry. The man was more famous than him! He sent two assassins to kill the man and they succeeded. When the man was dead two angels came to see him. One had orange hair and the other had gorgeous brown curly hair. The brown haired one spoke "We understand how famous you are down on earth. We came to give you a choice: we can bring you back the exact moment you died and we can get rid of the assassins. Or you can just be dead." The man was shocked. "Can I go back to earth and again live?" He said. The orange haired angel spoke: "We first have something to show you." The angels each grasped one of his hands and they flew down to earth. They were in a desert with a clear blue river running through it. The river was beautiful, with all kinds of marine life swimming in it. "This is the river before you came." said the brown haired angel. The river suddenly was polluted, dirty with animal carcasses rotting on the banks and litter floating around. The river was brown with pollution. It all appeared to be coming from a large tributary flowing off into the desert. It was bustling with people and boats. The people in the boats were throwing cans, bags and all their litter over the side of the boats. The orange haired angel turned to the man "You came and this happened." The man stood there for a while. "I have decided. I don't want to ever have lived." The angels nodded. The man then forgot everything he had ever known.