0 - The Open Casket

I solemnly walked in quiet despair.
Nursing my aching heart, how could this be?
The pain was so great, just too much to bear.
This just can not be happening to me.
The room was engulfed in a sea of black.
The atmosphere thick with sadness and fear.
I was already there: no turning back.
The corpse was so far and yet was so near.
My eyes saw something never seen before.
This death I so feared is just a long rest.
New life beginning, a walk through the door.
The world that awaits us will be the best.
I looked in the casket to see my friend
And patiently waited until my end.
