1 - When I woke up

This morning I woke up feeling dead, Then as I remembered why all these thoughts flooded my head, They pushed me into a horrifying nightmare, Then I felt my eyes flare, I felt the hate rise, Even though hate is not very wise, My life crumbled, Down, down all my imaginary tears tumbled, Oh how I choked, As my insides turned oh-so blood soaked, So now comes the day, Were your going to painfully pay, The voices in my head devised an evil and painful plan, A plan that shows my hate for you the pitiful man, What you did sealed your fate, Now your going to see what happens when you cause me to hate, I will laugh as I throw down your heart, Your most fragile part, I will watch it splatter, And then I'll serve it on a shameful platter, I thought you understood, But I should have seen under that faded hood, It was all just an act, Now your body won't be fully intact, With all that said, I hope you get it through your pathetic head, I used to think of you as a friend, But little did I see how that would quickly end, I sang you your death song, So good bye and so long
