1 - A Very Special Christmas

The dog demon stared cross-eyed at the tiny white snowflake that was perched on his nose.

Inu-Yasha grunted and shook his head, a waterfall of snow falling from his head. It had been snowing in the Feudal Era for a few weeks. Inu-Yasha was sitting near the well, alone, while Sango, Miroku, and Shippo were at Kaede's village. Inu-Yasha stared at the well, getting very impatient. Finally, blue light came from the well and Kagome climbed out of the well.

"Took ya long enough," Inu-Yasha said sternly. He backed up a little, expecting Kagome to flare back, but she didn't. Kagome smiled.

"Inu-Yasha, do you want to come to my time with me?" Kagome asked, walking over to Inu-Yasha, still bearing a grin.

Inu-Yasha blinked. "Why?"

Kagome fiddled with her fingers for a second before saying, "Just...because... It's a surprise for you."

Inu-Yasha snorted, got up, and jumped down the well with Kagome. As they were going down, Kagome grabbed onto Inu-Yasha. The dog demon blushed and looked away from Kagome. They landed, and climbed up the well's ladder. Kagome walked into her house with Inu-Yasha following her. The dog demon once again shook the snow off of his head.

"Hello?! Sota? Mom? Gramps?" Kagome yelled, looking around. "Well, looks like we're the only people here." As she said that, a devious grin spread across her face when Inu-Yasha wasn't looking. She grabbed the dog demon's hand and lead him into the living room. Kagome set this small place on fire, and sat down. Inu-Yasha sat down beside her. Suddenly, the middle schooler took a blanket from beside her and wrapped it around herself and Inu-Yasha. She placed her head on his shoulder, and soon fell asleep. Inu-Yasha fell asleep too.

"Kagome? Inu-Yasha?"

Inu-Yasha opened his eyes slowly and looked up into a young boy's face. He felt a figure beside him zoom up from her seat.

"Sota?!" Kagome snapped at her brother. "What're you doing?!"

Sota grinned. "That's my line, sis."

Inu-Yasha got up groggily and wiped sleep from his eyes. He blinked sleepily at Kagome, already feeling his face turning red. He looked around to see Kagome's mom at the doorway, smiling, almost crying.

gave back the kiss. Eventually they broke apart. Kagome smiled, and walked on, leaving Inu-Yasha near the well. Inu-Yasha traced his fingers across tingling lips.

"I can't wait until next Christmas."
