1 - Stockholm Syndrome

Stockholm syndrome

[br]

Sometimes I find I cannot conceal the smile that plays at my lips,[br]

But it's that smile that hides the sorrow that aches within[br]

[br]

I want to break the lust that wracks my body,[br]

The desire that takes over my soul, like a curse[br]

[br]

There's nothing left, in the mental confinements of my mind[br]

Except a sorry state of cruel illness[br]

[br]

An echo of grief haunts my eyes,[br]

That was once filled with a sad happiness[br]

[br]

Joy no longer finds a place in my emotions,[br]

A melancholic symphony plays in my heart instead [br]

[br]

I want to scream your name over and over,[br]

But I find I am mute, without your burning touch[br]

[br]

I used to run from you and your horrible thoughts,[br]

But now I search intently, carrying myself forcefully[br]

[br]

I was ravished, claimed by your hungry ways,[br]

But at least then I had been found[br]

[br]

Now I wonder, lost and silent,[br]

My tears betray my weakness in strength[br]

[br]

I feel disgusted in myself,[br]

For feeling what so many people call love[br]

[br]

But this is neither lust nor love,[br]

It is a yearning passion for a sin[br]

[br]

The truth is that you're nothing to me,[br]

Except a mindless indulgence [br]

[br]

That racks this broken body of mine,[br]

That I long to satisfy.[br]
